Inform Your Community Announces Launch of New York Chapter

Inform Your Community (IYC), a New York, New York- based nonprofit, has announced that it has opened an organizational chapter in New York City. President of the chapter lovingly called IYC NYC. Isabella Crawford along with Secretary Jake Mooney have hosted events at the brand new Pier 57 space in Manhattan's iconic Chelsea neighborhood overlooking the Hudson River including an adult crafting event on Restorative Justice where attendees made leather or velvet metal stud bracelets.

According to IYC NYC's Chapter President, "In a post-pandemic world it is essential to connect with our community in person. The constant bombardment of misinformation/disinformation today (exacerbated by the fast nature of the internet) seems to be dividing us into smaller and smaller factions. IYC's nonpartisan presentation of topics is a new way for people to come together and establish a basic understanding of pressing topics and issues to allow for deeper and mutual understanding. The freedom to voice our opinion is a necessary right but communities need to be informed as well, and remain investigative and skeptical. Critical thinking is an essential tool in the digital age; our events allow an entry level dissection of a topic with group activities and the cultural benefits of discussing and creating art, the interpersonal benefits of playing a game with others and hearing experts discuss their informed opinion, with attendees having the opportunity to ask clarifying questions."
